DESIGN IS IN THE DETAILS

Our work as interior designers is so much more than selecting beautiful finishes, furnishings and fixtures. At its core, our work is about responding to how people live, work and play. This attention to a space's inhabitants is always important, but is most significant with our residential clients.

When we work with clients to design their homes we really dig into how they live and interact with their space down to the most minute details. We think through every niche in a bedroom, every cupboard and drawer in a kitchen and every shelf that holds a clients' favorite books and most prized possessions. Thoughtful millwork design offers the greatest opportunity for us to cater to our clients' preferences and really improve the way their space functions for them.

NEW KIDS ON THE BLOCK

PTD's greatest asset is our well-rounded and dedicated team of staff and designers. As a small firm, finding people who are a match both in experience and disposition is of the utmost importance. Lucky for us, we've just welcomed three incredibly talented new members to our team. Each brings a unique experience, perspective and personality to the office - it turns out good things really do come in threes!

Taylor is a recent graduate of Central Michigan University with a degree in interior design and visual merchandising . She brings a fresh perspective and a complete willingness to tackle any task thrown her way with skill, speed and humor.

Emily is a true jack of all trades with a background in fashion design as well as interior design. She honed her amazing eye for color and texture while living and working in both New York and San Francisco and designing and running her own homegoods company, Beacon & Batten.

Studio Manager Jeff comes to PTD with a wealth of experience: from artist to accounting, barista to bookseller, manufacturing to management, Jeff has done it all. No matter the task, Jeff keeps his cool and delivers.

ART AROUND TOWN

PTD is fortunate to collaborate with incredible artisans and craftspeople of all disciplines. Our admiration for their skill and creativity is immense and a recent show at I.M. Weiss Gallery celebrated these same traits in 'Perspectives in Contemporary Woodworking.'

The exhibition showcased the work of artists modifying traditional modes of woodworking to create objects both conceptual and functional. Work from Breanne Johnson, Dawson Moore, Seth Keller and Forrest Hudes examined object, materiality and form. The exhibit may be over, but head to the artists' websites for continued inspiration.
